20a. How does the Committee accomplish its purpose?

The Deputy Director for Intramural Research (DDIR), National Institutes of Health (NIH), and other staff within the Office of Intramural Research (OIR) require independent advice and recommendations as it oversees and coordinates the intramural staff training programs managed by its Office of Intramural Training and Education, technology transfer programs managed by its Office of Technology Transfer; the programs managed by its other three offices, the Office of Animal Care and Use, the Office of Human Subjects Research, and the Office of NIH History. The committee meets periodically to provide advice and recommendations on specific accomplishments, overall strengths and weaknesses of a particular program, as well as recommendations for future directions. The committee may also consider the overall design, content, development and/or delivery of training programs to specific groups, as well as recommendations concerning program and policy development and resource allocation.

20b. How does the Committee balance its membership?

The committee consists of up to 15 members, including the chair, appointed by the Director, NIH. Members and the chair are selected from outstanding leaders in private industry, academia, state governments, or other segments of the general public for their knowledge and expertise in health care governance and management; operational aspects of large academic health care centers; clinical research; and other areas of importance to the Office of Intramural Research. All non-Federal members, including the chair, will serve as Special Government Employees. The Director, NIH has selected new members who will soon be vetted through Ethics and HR.

20c. How frequent and relevant are the Committee Meetings?

The committee met once this year, in September 2018.

20d. Why can't the advice or information this committee provides be obtained elsewhere?

The Deputy Director for Intramural Research, NIH, and other staff members within the Office of Intramural Research require independent and expert advice on the programs managed within the Office of Intramural Research. No other existing advisory committee at the NIH has the required expertise to provide this type of advice.

20e. Why is it necessary to close and/or partially closed committee meetings?

NA

21. Remarks

Reports: The committee did not produce any public reports. DFO/Committee Decision Maker: Based on the assignment of responsibilities within the Office of Intramural Research, the roles of committee's designated federal official and committee decision maker roles are held by the same individual. Costs: The committee met in September 2018. Prior to that teleconference, a (non-FACA) site visit was held where travel and per diem costs were incurred. Regular committee meetings are held by teleconference.

Narrative Description

The National Institutes of Health (NIH), a part of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, is the nation's medical research agency—making important discoveries that improve health and save lives. Thanks in large part to NIH-funded medical research, Americans today are living longer and healthier. Life expectancy in the United States has jumped from 47 years in 1900 to 78 years as reported in 2009, and disability in people over age 65 has dropped dramatically in the past 3 decades. In recent years, nationwide rates of new diagnoses and deaths from all cancers combined have fallen significantly. More than 80% of the NIH's budget goes to more than 300,000 research personnel at over 3,000 universities and research institutions. In addition, about 6,000 scientists work in NIH's own laboratories, most of which are on the NIH main campus in Bethesda, Maryland. The main campus is also home to the NIH Clinical Center, the largest hospital in the world totally dedicated to clinical research. Successful biomedical research depends on the talent and dedication of the scientific workforce. NIH supports many innovative training programs and funding mechanisms that foster scientific creativity and exploration. The goal is to strengthen our nation's research capacity, broaden our research base, and inspire a passion for science in current and future generations of researchers. The Office of Intramural Research (OIR) is responsible for oversight and coordination of intramural research, training, and technology transfer conducted within the laboratories and clinics of the National Institutes of Health (NIH). NIH's intramural facilities are located on the main campus in Bethesda, MD, as well as in Research Triangle Park, NC (NIEHS); Baltimore, MD (NIDA, NIA, and NHGRI); Frederick, MD (NCI); Hamilton, MT (NIAID); and Phoenix, AZ (NIDDK). Organizationally, the individual laboratories and sections answer to the 27 Institutes and Centers of NIH which conduct applied and basic biomedical research in particular disease or subject areas.
